

Japan is the strongest country in american football outside of North America. The japanese national team has won the first two world cups in Italy (1999) and Germany (2003) and Japan was the host of the third world cup in 2007, finishing second behind Team USA.

Since it is hard to find information about american football in Japan on the internet that people who are not able to read Japanese can understand american-football-japan.com will try to help out by offering information about american football in Japan in English and German. Time permitting we will offer more and more information including scores and standings of the X League and the college leagues (Kanto League and Kansai League) during the season in Japan (September through early January). Any feedback is welcome and will help improve this site.
